Adenoids are spongy tissues located between the back of the nose and the throat.

Adenoids usually cannot be seen with the naked eye. They can cause asthma and even affect a person's hearing. A constant cold in the head can often be traced to the adenoids. They can interfere with breathing and harm the formation of the face and jaws. They also can cause teeth to grow crookedly. In addition, they have been known to affect a person mentally. Ear ailments can be caused by adenoids.

Ademoids can be removed by means of a simple operation. After the operation, the patient usually shows a marked improvement in breathing and hearing. The word adenoid comes from a Greek term meaning glandular.

Here are some facts about the White Pelican. This huge-billed bird, once found in the East as well as the West, is now seldom seen on the Atlantic coast. Its distinctive feature is the great pouch that hangs from its lower bill. The bill may be eighteen inches long, and the pouch six inches deep and almost as long as the beak. The bird uses this as a net for catching small fish, as he swims around. The pelican is an awkward, ungainly bird on land. Its flight combines alternate flapping and sailing. Large numbers of pelicans nest together on sandy islands. Federal sanctuaries have saved them from extinction. Its length is 4 to 6 feet.

The Eiffel Tower is a huge, wrought-iron skeleton tower built on the Champs de Mars in Paris. Alexandre Gustave Eiffel built it for the exposition of 1889.

The tower rises to a height of 984 feet from a base 330 feet square. Elevators and stairways lead to the platforms and to the top. Restaurants, a weather station, and spaces for experiments occupy the platforms.

The Eiffel Tower contains 7,300 tons of iron and steel and cost over $1,000,000 to build.

For many years the Eiffel Tower was the highest structure in the world. It served as an important military observation post during World War I. Later a radio station was operated from there. The Empire State Building in New York City is now higher, rising 1,250 feet.

The Pointer is a dog used to hunt quail and other game birds. It was raised in both Europe and Americe. The dog is called a pointer because it stops as still as a statue when it smells a bird, and "points" by facing in the direction of the bird, often with one front paw lifted and its tail held out stiffly behind. The pointer is classed as a field dog, along with setters and retrievers. Setters and retrievers usually have long hair, but the pointer has a short coat like a hound, and hound-like ears, head and body. It usually weighs about fifty pounds, and is white with spots of lemon, tan, or black. The pointer has speed, and a keen sense of smell. His strong legs can carry him through heavy undergrowth. Pointers are very popular in both England and America.

Milk is the most nearly perfect food. One quart should be included in your diet every day. You do not have to drink it all. You may get part of it in creamed soups, breads, cream filled pastries, pudding and ice cream.

In order to safeguard the milk supply, your state has set up certain standards of cleanliness under which dairies must operate. The cows, barns, equipment, and attendants must all pass rigid sanitary and health inspection. No milk is absolutely safe until it has been treated to destroy any harmful bacteria. This process is called pasteurization. Dried, concentrated, evaporated, or condensed milk are other forms of milk commonly used.
